

Moving Forward

COVID-19 Update 2022

As we move into our third year of managing the COVID-19 pandemic, we want to reiterate how committed we continue to be in keeping our clients and team members safe. College Fresh remains up-to-date on local and state mandates in all areas we operate, however, we know that the varying guidelines across the country can be confusing. Therefore, we want to provide you with our company-wide practices that we implement daily in all of our operations across the nation .

What is College Fresh doing to help prevent the spread of COVID-19?

All College Fresh employees are

- encouraged to get vaccinated against COVID-19.
- asked to monitor their health on a daily basis before going in to work. If they are ill they are to stay home.
- required to wear masks and gloves pursuant to their respective chapter house in which they work.
- social distancing between themselves and chapter members.

If a College Fresh employee tests positive for COVID-19, our Employee Resources team immediately investigates the incident, which includes contact tracing to ensure all parties exposed are contacted and quarantined, if appropriate.

What do current meal services look like?

Our team consistently monitors state and local COVID-19 regulations to ensure we are in compliance with all safety measures at each of our operations. Because of the ever-changing regulations across the country, meal services differ from campus to campus and house to house. College Fresh is happy to accommodate each chapter house based on the type of service that is most comfortable for the members. We continue to offer buffet style self-service , chef-plated service, or to-go meals.

Has the impact of staffing shortages affected College Fresh?

College Fresh has felt the impact of staffing shortages due to the pandemic. While this has been tough, our Human Resources team continues to push to find additional creative sources to attract new, qualified candidates across the country. Our main priority will always be to provide exceptional service to our clients. No matter the circumstances, we will ensure your members are accommodated.
